

Artificial Intelligence Technologies Policy

(approved in October 2025)

The following guidelines ensure that students learn not only course-specific content, but also develop the necessary skills of reading, writing, research, critical thinking, and English language proficiency. Violations are subject to penalties according to the academic honesty policy. Formators and seminarians are expected to contribute to the enforcement of this policy.

Students are permitted to use: (1) spelling and grammar checkers; (2) search engines for initial leads in research, which must be subsequently tracked down, confirmed, and properly cited; and (3) translation tools for assistance when reading sources that are not in English.

Students are not permitted to use: (1) any tool for drafting or composing any part of any assignment, written or oral; (2) any translation tools for completing assignments in language courses; or (3) any tools for translating work that was composed by the student in a language other than English.
